

HP Master ASE - Wireless Networks Implementer V1

This certification validates that you can successfully design, implement, and troubleshoot secure small-enterprise-level wireless networks and can integrate them into an existing wired infrastructure.

Why earn this certification?

- To position you as a master engineer with the ability to design, implement, and troubleshoot advanced network solutions for multisite, global enterprise networks and data centers.
- To verify your ability to align business and IT needs to deploy enterprise-wide, open standard networks, including integration with existing, proprietary networks.
- To position yourself as a knowledgeable expert who understands wired and wireless technology and HP Networking wireless products and solutions. This is an advantage in today's mobile world, where wireless networks are widely deployed in workplaces, including hospitals, retail shops, schools, and universities.

Candidate

Typical candidates for this certification have three-to-five years of experience in complex wired technologies used in Campus LAN core and edge environments and want to specialize in wireless implementations.
